The Last Coming

The term outsider art has been used to describe work produced exterior to the mainstream of modern art by certain self-taught visionaries, spiritualists, eccentrics, recluses, psychiatric patients, criminals, and others beyond the perceived margins of society. Yet the idea of such a raw, untutored creativity remains a contentious and much-debated issue in the art world. Is this creative instinct a natural, innate phenomenon, requiring only the right circumstances—such as isolation or alienation—in order for it to be cultivated? Or is it an idealistic notion projected onto the art and artists by critics and buyers? David Maclagan argues that behind the critical and commercial hype lies a cluster of assumptions about creative drives, the expression of inner worlds, originality, and artistic eccentricity. Although outsider art is often presented as a recent discovery, these ideas, Maclagan reveals, belong to a tradition that goes back to the Renaissance, when the modern image of the artist began to take shape.

In Outsider Art, Maclagan challenges many of the current opinions about this increasingly popular field of art and explores what happens to outsider artists and their work when they are brought within the very world from which they have excluded themselves.

Iteration:Again documents and reflects upon a series of thirteen temporary public art commissions by twenty-one Australian and international artists that took place across Tasmania from September 18 to October 15, 2011. Produced by Contemporary Art Spaces Tasmania and David Cross, in conjunction with seven partner curators, Iteration:Again presents a compelling array of temporary artworks in largely unexpected places throughout Tasmania. Working to transform our experience of place for a moment in time, each commission seeks to address how temporary interventions or responses by artists to public sites, environments and buildings can serve to open up new ways of understanding Tasmania as a place with very complex cultural, social and spatial resonances. How it might be possible to introduce transformative elements that challenge the notion of a fixed or definitive artwork grounded in one location? By asking the artists to make four different chapters or 'iterations' over the course of a four-week period, David Cross challenged each practitioner to think through how change or processes of transition may function to make the art experience an unstable and contingent one. This idea of incorporating change into the work highlights a growing interest by artists in emphasizing art as a potentially theatrical or even fictive medium with the audience experiencing different moments or stages of encounter over a number of weeks. The idea provided for the possibility of narrative sequences, formal investigations, or temporal shifts that saw key additions or subtractions over time. Each commission sought to recast our understanding of public artwork from a discrete event or viewing experience, to a suite of experiences. The book includes sections on each project by the artists, including Ruben Santiago, Paul O'Neill, Maddie Leach and Toby Huddlestone, with a curatorial statement introducing the work and a commissioned response by thirteen Australian and international writers. It also features two major essays by Cross and an essay on post-studio practice by noted public art scholar and curator Marco Marcon.

Spontaneous Gumption

The need to personalize our surroundings is a defining human characteristic. For some this need becomes a compulsion to transform their personal surroundings into works of art. The John Michael Kohler Arts Center in Sheboygan, Wisconsin, has undertaken the mission to preserve these environments, which are presented for the first time in Sublime Spaces and Visionary Worlds. This colorful and inspiring book features the work of twenty-two visionary artists whose locales, personal histories, and reasons for art-making vary widely but who all share a powerful connection to the home as art. Featured projects range from art environments that remain intact, such as Simon Rodia's Watts Towers in California, to sites lost over the years, such as the "Machine Factory" of "original Rhinestone Cowboy" Loy Bowlin's and "Concrete Bestiary" of "Witch of Fox Point" Mary Nohl, each artist and project is described in detail through a wealth of visuals and text. Sublime Spaces and Visionary Worlds reminds us that our decorative choices tell the world not just what we like but who we are.

Spotlight on the Art of Resilience

Even in a world where many students have to worry about making it to their philosophy class on time and solving a series of grisly murders, evil stalks the halls of the Wyanmore School for the Gifted, and the brilliant but troubled Everin has no shortage of suspects. At the top of Everin's list is the snobbish Vixley Carrington IV, a billionaire's son who has just returned from a mysterious absence. A day after Everin runs into Vixley on campus, both the philosophy teacher and the chief custodian are murdered. A strange substitute teacher, who communicates only through the school intercom system, tasks Everin and his class with catching the culprit. Complicating things is the appearance of a hooded figure that indicates that not everything is as it seems. As Everin and his various classmates delve deeper into the mystery, they'll learn that the violence was no ordinary act of human malice. There is something much bigger happening at this school, and the murderer's identity isn't the only secret as yet uncovered. When Everin discovers the truth, it will shatter his entire world.

Parallel Visions

Bored, single and without a care in the world, Cindy Parsons spends her days illustrating pictures and comics for her clients, yet she dreams of something more. In her life, she always wanted to be a detective, but unfortunately, she didn't really have the chops. Forced to the sidelines due to her own inability to pass a police exam, Cindy spends her days drawing and watching detective shows. Then one day she receives an email, it's strange and short. "It was him all along. He's going to kill you too. I hope I'm not too late." Such an email. Cindy quickly finds, was not meant for her at all! Can she find out who the email was meant for before it was too late? No! Cindy Parsons, her first exciting adventure as an amateur detective. With no training except for the copious hours of police dramas that she watched, follow her as she looks to crack the case of a lifetime. She'll face many challenges in her quest to find out the truth of the mysterious email, the police, her own fears and a complex web of mystery that will take her farther than she ever had before. Can she solve the case, avoid getting thrown in jail for meddling and overcome her own naivete in order to find out the truth of the email that was sent to the wrong person?

Graffiti Lives

This spectacular volume reproduces in full color some 150 pieces from the Anthony Petullo Collection, an extraordinary assembly of paintings and drawings produced by individuals working outside the perimeter of conventional art training and troubles. Some of the pieces are fanciful, even whimsical. Others are haunting in their unembellished depiction of vulnerability and terror. Some are spare; others are crowded with figures. Some exhibit a childlike simplicity; others are almost sculpted in their precision and clarity. The thirty-six European and North American artists represented in Self-Taught and Outsider Art include a hospital janitor, a factory worker, concentration camp survivors, a truck driver, a guard at the Tate Gallery, a self-proclaimed fortuneteller and healer, and a female impersonator and Hollywood screenwriter. Their "canvases" include paper, wood, long strips of calico cloth, and cardboard. One artist paints with both hands simultaneously; another finds it difficult to paint except amid the chaos of his family. Many began painting quite late in life; others had early dreams of pursuing art that were deferred by economic and family circumstances. Some have been institutionalized or incarcerated; others have struggled with terrible poverty and personal loss. Perhaps more than the work of conventionally trained artists, pieces by outsider or self-taught artists are entwined with the identities of their creators. In support of that connection, Self-Taught and Outsider Art presents the artworks in conjunction with portraits, usually photographs, of the artists and brief biographical sketches. In some cases a friend or patron provides an anecdote about the artist. Taken together, these offer an intimate glimpse of the process by which art emerges from experience.

Promptings

Outsider Art and Folk Art have been gaining increasing attention over the past two decades. They have been described as the 'hidden face of contemporary art'. Once marginalised and seen very much as a minority interest, these forms of art are now the subject of important international exhibitions and even have specially dedicated museums on both sides of the Atlantic. Hidden, secret, or reclusive this art may have been, but today its large international following stands as a testimony to its unique power and individuality. This second and enlarged edition of the Outsider Art Sourcebook is the first international publication to act as a comprehensive guide through this fascinating field. It leads its readers to make their own discoveries, showing where collections and exhibitions of Folk Art and Outsider Art can be found and how to visit the most sensational of the visionary environments self-built architecture and large scale sculpture gardens. With detailed full page entries on 130 artists and 50 visionary environments, this guide encompasses a full view of the most important areas of a field that still has discoveries to make. Students, scholars and art followers are introduced to the principal theorists of Art Brut, guided through important literature on the subject and given an introduction the most important artists and the most stunning visionary environments. With additional listings of specialist art galleries, museums and collections, publications, organisations and relevant websites, the Outsider Art Sourcebook is essential reading for enthusiasts and beginners alike.

Artists of pure heart II

More than 100 years of unschooled artistic genius is gathered in this wide-ranging survey that will elicit and inform Outsider Art's rapidly growing audience. Visionary art, art brut, art of the insane, na"ve art, vernacular art, "rare vision"--what do all these and many other categories describe? An art made outside the boundaries of official culture, first recognized more than a century ago by German psychiatrists who appreciated the profound artistic expression in the work of institutionalized patients. Promoted by brilliant museum curators like Alfred Barr and artists like Jean Dubuffet, such work became a wellspring of modern and contemporary art. This volume brings together works by twelve of the most influential self-taught artists to emerge during the past century. Each represents a facet of the outsider art phenomenon, from mental patients like Adolf Wölfli and Mart'n Ram'rez, through vernacular masters like Bill Traylor and Thornton Dial, to artists who seem to be in touch with other worlds, such as Madge Gill and Henry Darger. Related artists are featured along with each key figure, allowing a fuller picture to emerge. This book presents a narrative of the history of outsider art, clarifies predominant theoretical issues, and draws comparisons with the modernist tradition. It brings into focus the enormous contributions self-taught artists have made to our understanding of creative genius and presents them in a book that will enthrall anyone interested in Outsider Art.

Today the work of so-called "outsider" artists is receiving unprecedented attention. This major critical appraisal of America's 20th-century self-taught artists coincides with a major 1998 traveling exhibition organized by the Museum of American Folk Art in New York. While some of these artists have received critical recognition, others remain virtually unknown, following their muse regardless. 150 color images.

The controversy surrounding the significant “Into the Heart of Africa” exhibit at the Royal Ontario Museum in Canada is explored in this compelling and analytical text. The exhibit has become an international, controversial touchstone for issues surrounding the politics of visual representation, such as the challenges to curatorial and ethnographic authority in multicultural and postcolonial contexts. Asking why the museum’s exhibit failed so many people, the author examines such issues as institutional politics, the broad political and intellectual climate surrounding museums, the legacies of colonialism and traditions of representation of Africa, and the politics of irony. By drawing upon anthropological and cultural criticism, the book offers a unique account of the ways in which an ambiguous exhibit about colonialism became the site of an expansive re-reading of the Heart of Africa.

Outsider Art is a name for the often mesmerizing creations of those who live and work at a distance from prevailing notions about mainstream artistic trends, individuals who are frequently unaware of themselves as artists or their works as art. This book presents and discusses some of the 20th century's most significant examples of Outsider Art, artists from around the world, including Gedewon, a cleric from Ethiopia who made unique and psychedelic talismans; William Hawkins, an African-American self-taught artist with a unique pop sensibility; the Mexican artist Martin Ramirez, creator of large-scale works that tell tales of mestizo life; Nek Chand Saini, whose Rock Garden in India is a leading visionary site; Hung Tung, whose colorful scrolls reflect both traditional Taiwanese culture and fantastic imagination; former Navajo medicine man Charlie Willetto, carver of raw, expressionistic figures and animals; Anna Zemankova, Czech maker of dreamy, biomorphic drawings, perhaps done in a trance or mediumistic state; and Italian artist Carlo Zinelli, whose bold graphic compositions display incredible patterns and energy. An international overview of Outsider Art demonstrates the importance of place and time - as well as internal genius - in these artists' creative processes.

American Countercultures: An Encyclopedia of Nonconformists, Alternative Lifestyles, and Radical Ideas in U.S. History

"The Last Coming" a beautiful masterpiece written by Andrew Grey, brings to fiction the Last days of mankind. Peter, the main character, is an ordinary man who is chosen to stand against a murderous gang of beasts. At a height of nearly 14 feet, these beasts do not hesitate to rip humans apart and burn them to ashes. The battle of Peter that starts shyly from a dream makes quickly its progression into a horrifying reality that will not leave the readers emotionally untouched. But, if one rapidly concludes that the goal of the book is simply to entertain its audience with a new story, then one should think twice. The "Last Coming" offer readers a combination of biblical teachings as well as an inspiration for their life struggles.

Outsider Art Sourcebook

Outsider art, traditionally the work of psychiatric patients, offenders and minority groups, and art therapy have shared histories of art created in psychiatric care. As the two fields grow, this book reveals the current issues faced by both disciplines and traces their shared histories to help them build clearer and more coherent identities. More often than not, the history of art therapy has been tied to psychological and psychiatric roots, which has led to problems in defining the field and forced boundaries between what is considered 'art' and what is considered 'art therapy'. Similarly, the name and identity of outsider art is constantly debated. By viewing art therapy and outsider art through their shared histories, this book helps to alleviate the challenges and issues of definition faced by the fields today.

Self-taught Artists of the 20th Century

Counterculture, while commonly used to describe youth-oriented movements during the 1960s, refers to any attempt to challenge or change conventional values and practices or the dominant lifestyles of the day. This fascinating three-volume set explores these movements in America from colonial times to the present in colorful detail. "American Countercultures" is the first reference work to examine the impact of countercultural movements on American social history. It highlights the writings, recordings, and visual works produced by these movements to educate, inspire, and incite action in all eras of the nation's history. A-Z entries provide a wealth of information on personalities, places, events, concepts, beliefs, groups, and practices. The set includes numerous illustrations, a topic finder, primary source documents, a bibliography and a filmography, and an index.

Sublime Spaces and Visionary Worlds

The art of self-taught artists - including visionaries, folk creators, spiritualists, recluse, the 'mad' and the socially marginalized - was once scorned by the art establishment. Among the first to value and collect such works was the French artist Jean Dubuffet (1901-85), who coined the term Art Brut, or "raw art". He saw Art Brut as the purest form of creation because it was 'uncoked' by culture, touched by a raw nerve and deriving directly from the psyche. Some 50 years later, a wave of enthusiasm for contemporary folk art has gripped countries as far apart as India and the United States. John Maizels ties these disparate strands together, providing an extensive survey of the self-taught art of the twentieth century. Today a bewildering range of terminology has emerged, along with growing enthusiasm, for strains of creative expression outside the conventional art world. In Raw Creation, Maizels traces the history of the recognition and study of this art and examines different theories and definitions that have grown up around it. He provides detailed expositions of the work of individual artists ranging from such Art Brut masters as Adolf Wölfflin and Aloise Corbaz, to such gifted American folk artists as Bill Taylor

Outsider Art

The Reverend Howard Finster (1916-2001) was called the Oakiebooods William Blake and the Andy Warhol of the South, and he is considered the godfather of contemporary American folk and visionary art. This book is the first interpretive analysis of the intertwined artistic and religious significance of Finster's work within the context of the American Outsider Art tradition. Finster began preaching as a teenager in the South in the 1930s. But it was not until he received a revelation from God, the age of sixty, that he began to make sacred art. A modern-day Noah who saw his art as a religious crusade to save the world before it was too late, Finster worked around the clock, often subsisting on a diet of peanut butter and instant coffee. He spent the last years of his life feverishly creating his environmental artwork called Paradise Garden and what would ultimately number almost fifty thousand works of Odd and nasty art. This was visionary work that obsessively combined images and text and featured apocalyptic biblical imagery, flying saucers from outer space, and popular cultural icons such as Elvis Presley, Marilyn Monroe, Henry Ford, Mona Lisa, and George Washington. In the 1980s and 90s, he developed cult celebrity status, and he appeared in the Venice Biennale and on the Tonight Show. His work graced the album covers of bands such as R.E.M. and Talking Heads. This book explores the life and religious-artistic significance of Finster and his work from the personal perspective of religion scholar Norman Girardot, friend to Finster and his family during the later years of the artist's life.

Vernacular Visionaries

Black Art Ancestral Legacy

In 1912 Paul Klee declared that the art of the mentally ill, as well as the art of children, "really should be taken far more seriously than are the collections of all our art museums if we truly intend to reform today's art." What Klee found most fascinating and instructive about the art of "outsiders"—those self-taught individuals, sometimes mentally disturbed, who create while isolated from mainstream culture—was the sincerity, depth, and power of their un-adulterated, unmediated expressions. Parallel Visions, an exhibition and catalogue organized and produced by the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, reveals the considerable influence that outsider art has had on the development of twentieth-century art. The work of such "marginalized" artists and compulsive visionaries as Antonin Artaud, Ferdinand Cheval, Henry Darger, Howard Finster, Madge Gill, Martin Ramirez, P. M. Wentworth, Adolf Wölfi, and Joseph Yoakum is juxtaposed with the work of devotees of outsider art among mainstream artists. Essays by the curators of the exhibition, Maurice Tuchman and Carol S. Elek, and other commentators offer a history of this phenomenon as well as an exploration of issues crucial to the formation of our aesthetic and critical judgments and our notions of creativity. In addition to the curators, the contributors include Russell Bowman, Roger Cardinal, Barbara Freeman, Sander L. Gilman, Mark Gilson, Reinhold Heller, John M. MacGregor, Donald Preziosi, Allen Weiss, Jonathan Williams, and Sarah Wilson.

The World According to Roger Ballen

Outsider art has exploded onto the international art scene, gaining widespread attention for its startling originality and visual power. As an expression of raw creativity, outsider art remains associated with self-taught visionaries, psychotic patients, transvestite irons, eccentric outcasts, and unschooled artistic geniuses who create things outside of mainstream artistic trends and styles. Outsider Art: Visionary Worlds and Trauma provides a comprehensive guide through the contested terrain of outsider art and the related domains of art brut, visionary art, "art of the insane," and folk art. The book examines the history and primary issues of the field as well as explores the intersection between culture and individual creativity that is at the very heart of outsider art definitions and debates. Daniel Wójcik's interdisciplinary study challenges prevailing assumptions about the idiosyncratic status of outsider artists. This wide-ranging investigation of the art and lives of those labeled outsiders focuses on the ways that personal tragedies and suffering have inspired the art-making process. In some cases, trauma has triggered a creative transformation that has helped artists confront otherwise overwhelming life events. Additionally, Wójcik's study illustrates how vernacular traditions, religious worldviews, ethnic heritage, and popular culture have influenced such art. With its detailed consideration of personal motivations, cultural milieu, and the potentially therapeutic aspects of art making, this volume provides a deeper understanding of the artistic impulse and human creativity.

Do you frequently find yourself asking, Why? This book will, prayerfully, prompt you to see God acting in every circumstance in your life, from the mundane to the monumental, to appreciate that the Creator does, indeed, cause "all things [to] work for good to those who love God, to them who are called according to His purpose." (Romans 8:28) Through prose and poems based on personal experiences, the author shares pieces of her journey through faith-building events. If you have trouble focusing on God and His agenda, this book will sharpen your vision and lead you to reconsider God's purpose for the events in which you may find yourself involved on a daily basis.

Fractal Art Adult Coloring Book

This cross-disciplinary book, situated on the periphery of culture, employs humour to better comprehend the arts, the outsider and exclusion, illuminating the ever-changing social landscape, the vagaries of taste and limits of political correctness. Each chapter deals with specific themes and approaches — from the construct of outsider and complexity of humour, to Outsider Art and spaces — using various theoretical and analytical methods. Paul Clements draws on humour, especially from visual arts and culture (and to a lesser extent literature, film, music and performance), as a tool of ridicule, amongst other discourses, employed by the powerful but also as a weapon to satirize them. These ambiguous representations vary depending on context, often assimilated then reinterpreted in a game of authenticity that is poignant in a world of facsimile and "fake news." The humour styles of a range of artists are highlighted to reveal the fluidity and diversity of meaning which challenges expectations and at its best offers resistance and, crucially, a voice for the marginal. This book will be of particular interest to scholars in art history, cultural studies, fine art, humour studies and visual culture.

What are you going to do when the Hospitals are full and there are thousands of sick people outside waiting with rumors that most of the staff is sick and stocks have nearly run out? Most of the GPs are sick or closed and all the Chemists have big posters in their windows telling of the stocks that they have run out of, how are you going to treat your family, what are you going to do. This book is your last hope as there is nothing like it, as it is basically a survivors survival manual designed and set out in such a way as to teach you what you need to know at the fastest possible speed. Treatment should begin at the first sign of the symptoms or before and should hopefully have aborted the disease before it starts or made the condition a more mild form of the disease as it can be too late sometimes to do anything once you learn the name of a disease. We introduce you to Herbal and Homeopathic Medicine and go through the most nasty diseases on the planet, even the ones from the past such as Small Pox and give you the Herbal and Homeopathic remedies for the treatments and sometimes give you the symptoms of a disease not only through the normal way but through the eyes of a Practitioner who one hundred years ago or more was having to deal with it with his back against the wall and no one to rely on but themselves, this gives you a unique perspective that few have seen. In a separate section is Herbal and Homeopathic First Aid which focuses on injuries more on the Disaster side and gives you another perspective on using natural medicines that you can practice on yourself and family and at the same time will be adding to your knowledge. I have decided to include my novel Pandemic Flu, The Big One, A Naturopaths Story which will add life to a dry reference book and allow you to see how a paranoid lung damaged Naturopath works before and after a Pandemic using logic, the law of mechanics, a good knowledge of medicine and lots of commonsense. Great effort has been made in the teaching part to train your mind to think like a Professional Herbalist and to give you the resources that you would need, some parts have been written in such a way that as you gain experience and read that same part again later you will get a new and different messages from it.
